

Grants for Individuals 2017

Tips and contact information for approaching organisations for funding for individual children

Although bibic makes grant applications to charities and trusts for support for the work that it does as an organisation, it is not appropriate for the charity to make applications on behalf of individuals. We have therefore provided a list below of organisations that can be approached for individual grants and donations. Many of the charities we have provided details of below have good websites, which give details of how to prepare applications.

Local clubs which help charities

The following clubs have branches in many towns across the UK and organise charity fund-raising events. They can sometimes help families in their area with specific requests. If you go on the websites you will be able to search for specific branches in your area.

The Rotary Club www.ribi.org

The Lions www.lions.org.uk

The Round Table www.roundtable.co.uk

Try also to contact your local Women's Institute or Masonic Lodge – or other such groups that may be keen to support individual children in their area.

Local Trust Funds

In some places, there are Charitable Trusts for people of that town, county or parish, who are in need of a helping hand. To find details of these in your area you can do a search on the Charity Commission website.

Visit www.charity-commission.gov.uk

Select 'Find a Charity'

Select 'Advanced Search'

In the boxes on the right-hand = side search for 'registered charities', select 'specific areas', then input the town/city where you live and click on 'add' to select the area.

Charities

There are thousands of funds for certain disabilities or people in certain geographical areas. It's just a case of finding them and working out how best to make an application.

The majority of grant-making organisations will have criteria for who can apply for financial help. For example, an organisation may only provide financial help towards home improvements for a child. Other organisations may be for individuals living in a certain area, and others may specify what type of adaptations or equipment the organisation may provide funds towards.

Some of the organisations will request that your application for help with funding is supported by a professional, eg they may require a letter in support of your application from your social worker or doctor.

Some of the funds available are means-tested. This means that the organisation will assess your income when deciding if you are eligible to receive funding from them.

Below are a few points to consider and look out for when viewing Charity and Trust websites, when you are trying to find information out about the grants that they provide:

Criteria: What the charity see as eligible factors for receiving a grant including age, location, type of disability, organisations or individuals

Proof of hardship or need: You may be required to prove your income

Purpose of the grant: Services, equipment, activity, personal development etc

Type of grant available: Means tested, fixed lump sum, smaller payments, straight to the supplier or charity involved

Deadlines: Fixed dates to apply by or sometimes you can apply at any time and your application will be considered when it arrives. Generally, the grant giver will give you information about how long they take to consider applications before they let you know if you have been successful or not. Sometimes this can take up to six months or more.

Format for application: This can vary depending on the organisation. You might be asked to complete a form or you might have to write a letter. Check to see if you can send your letter by email or if the charity prefers to receive your communication by post.

Exclusions: Reasons why your application might not be eligible for example because of age, location of residence, previously having received a grant from the charity before, whether you earn too much, or if a charity does not fund individuals. It is really worth checking out the exclusions on a charity's website or giving the charity a call to check that you are eligible to apply, this can save you a lot of time in the long run – writing applications and completing forms can take a long time.

Although it can take a long time to initially put together an application, once you have done one it is easy to re-use the information for further applications. You might just want to tailor each application according to the requirements of the particular trust or charity that you are approaching.

The following list includes some charities offering grants for families with children with disabilities and special needs. Many of these organisations offer a lot more than grants, including information, advice and many other services. These are just a few of the organisations that exist to help. Online research for your specific area of residence will help you to find more. Please note that although some of these organisations would be suitable to approach for funding for bibic's services not all of them are – some provide funding for other items such as equipment, holidays, assistance with energy debts and household budgets etc.
